ROY TAYLOR

I have known Roy professionally and personally since 1991 in my previous capacity as an Operations Manager with SGS United Kingdom Limited (accredited management systems Certification Body), and more recently (since 2003) as a free-lance Quality Management Consultant.

I can confirm Roy's ability and skills to manage implementation projects in the areas of Health & Safety, Quality Assurance and Environmental management, both on single sites and in a multisite organisation.

Roy has been able to demonstrate an organised approach, ability to plan and manage people and the determination to successfully complete projects assigned to him within defined timescales.

He has acquired a good knowledge (through formal training and practical experience) of Health and Safety Management (e.g. OHSAS 18001), Quality Management (e.g. ISO9001) and Environmental Management (ISO 14001), together with general business management. Roy's specific employment experience has been in the construction and service industry sectors, but, at the level of management Roy has worked and also through his outside interests, his knowledge could equally be applied in other areas of business.

I know Roy to be a good and confident communicator and who works well with colleagues. I have also found him to be supportive and approachable on a personal level. These qualities together with his personal integrity make him ideally suited to future consultancy projects.
